Hadith in The Modern Era

By. Dr. Hj. Uswatun Hasanah, M.Ag

Abstrack

A great modern-day leader of an authoritative Islamic State had discourse to abolish and replace the Prophet's traditions which were deemed no longer compatible with the times. Among the hadiths that need to be replaced are hadiths about Camels as vehicles that used to accompany the Prophet's journey, the hadith about prohibiting women from going out without muhrim and hadith about the implementation of polygamy. If this discourse is continued then someday there will come a time when the generation of Muslims can no longer recognize and inherit any of the hadiths of the Prophet because before reaching their generation, the traditions were deleted and replaced by their predecessors one by one.

The thought that had disturbed one of the great leaders of the Islamic ummah could not be said to be one hundred percent wrong, criticized as a heretical thought let alone by the initiator of the idea, but the solution offered to address the traditions that were considered "outdated" needs to be straightened out. It is not the hadith that must be replaced but how the methodology captures the message of the hadith which must always be revised. Adjustment between the needs and the development of the times by looking at the similarity of the causes and objectives narrated by the hadith, in the end will make the traditions of the Prophet forever forever as a guide to life from generation to generation without being limited by place, time and circumstances.
