Abstract

The era of globalization is synonymous with advances in technology and information which are developing very rapidly and quickly. One of the results of technological advances is the use of the internet. Advances in science and technology can make it easier for us to access the information we need with just the touch of a finger. The impact of today's technological advances is that there are online frauds. Various online frauds that occur in Indonesia cause many losses to society, one of which is a crime committed by individuals who change the Qris Barcode on mosque charity boxes. The problem formulation in this research includes criminal sanctions for perpetrators of Qris Barcode change fraud according to positive law and Islamic criminal law. This research aims to find out what the sanctions are for the perpetrators in this case. The research method uses a normative research method, which is focused on literature study by collecting several library sources. The conclusion from this research is that in positive law the sanctions for perpetrators are violations of the law regarding fund transfers and criminal acts of online fraud. Regarding sanctions in Islamic criminal law, namely the application of the ta'zir penalty. The punishment for perpetrators of fraud is not explicitly explained in the text, so it can be said that the applicable punishment is in the form of ta'zir where the punishment is handed over entirely to Ulil Amri.
