ABSTRACT

This research was motivated by the fact that in Menanti Village, Kelekar District, Muara Enim Regency, there is a practice of jockeying for Pre-Employment Card Registration. The Pre-Employment Card program is an initiative of the Indonesian government that aims to improve the skills and work competencies of the community through assistance with training costs and incentives. The main objectives of this program are to reduce unemployment rates, improve workforce skills, and support entrepreneurship. The practice of jockeying in Pre-Employment Card registration arises for several reasons, such as technical difficulties in online registration, internet access, the desire to increase the chances of being accepted, and a lack of understanding of the registration procedure. In practice, there is an agreement between the two parties. This agreement uses wakālah bil ujrah (وكالة بالاجرة) and al-ijārah (الإجارة) as a form of agreement between the parties involved. Although technically the jockey service in the Pre-Employment Card registration does not cause direct losses, in its implementation, the training that should have been attended by participants receiving the Pre-Employment Card was actually carried out by jockeys. As a result, this practice leads to dishonest actions. This study was conducted with the aim of: 1) finding out how the Jockey Practices for Pre-Employment Card Registration are in Menanti Village, Kelekar District, Muara Enim Regency. 2) finding out how the Review of Sharia Economic Law on the Jockey Practices for Pre-Employment Card Registration is in Menanti Village, Kelekar District, Muara Enim Regency. This type of research is field research with data collection through literature studies, interviews, and documentation. The research sample consisted of 10 people, including 1 Pre-Employment jockey and 9 users of Pre-Employment jockey services. The data collected was analyzed descriptively qualitatively to then draw conclusions.

Keywords: Sharia Economic Law, Jockey, Pre-Employment.